A restored small one-story cottage with cement finish walls and board and batten lean-to rear addition. The walls are reputed to be sun-dried brick under the cement. There is a solid double door and the windows have solid paneled shutters. The gables have been covered with horizontal siding and there is a cedar shingle roof. There is an unusual chimney at the rear corner, probably used for the kitchen.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The oldest house in Seguin, Texas, is Los Nogales, a small building, constructed of sun-dried brick. The builder of the house is unknown, but by 1765 it was a station stop on the Old Spanish Trail, also known as the Old San Antonio Road, or Camino Real.

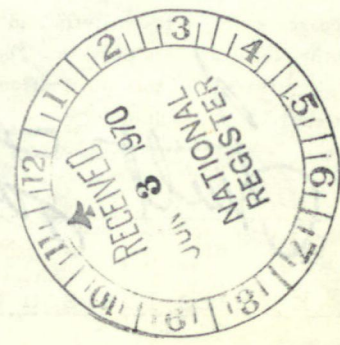

The most famous occupant of Los Nogales was Juan Seguin, who used it as a post office in 1825. The Seguin family was one of the most respected Mexican families in Texas. The town of Seguin was named after Juan Seguin. Seguin and his father were instrumental in helping Stephen F. Austin start his colony and in helping Texas win its independence in 1836. Juan himself entered the Alamo with Travis. Later he fought at the Battle of San Jacinto with Sam Houston and served as a lieutenant colonel in the Texas Cavalry.

Ben McCulloch, well-known surveyor of many Texas counties, used Los Nogales as his home in 1838 while he surveyed Seguin townsite. By 1840 pioneers had moved into the old house.

In 1952 Dr. Hugh Davis purchased Los Nogales; the following year the Seguin Conservation Society took steps to restore the building.

Recorded Texas Historical Landmark - 1962.
