DESCRIPTION

Very large, 2-1/2-story, high-styled Classical Revival house which on large lot. Roughly cross shaped in plan, the main feature is the front portico with 4 monumental Ionic columns, full balcony with turned balustrades, and rooftop railing accessible by gabled dormer. On either side of the house is a prominent gable; on the east side it forms the roof of a two story porte cochere support by 2 monumental Ionic columns. This side entrance resembles a Palladian motif and has a round window off to one side. A fine leaded glass window in a curved wall links the side entrance to the front porch. Other than the many decorative windows, most sash are 1/1. The original frame siding has been stuccoed over, and a two-car garage attached to a rear corner of the building.

Alterations: stucco, garage moved ___date

SIGNIFICANCE

This majestic mansion was one a cluster of similar houses that originally formed the nucleus for the Angelo Heights Subdivision developed after 1905. Built before 1908, as the residence of C.C. Walsh, president of the San Angelo Bank and Trust Company and later president of the powerful Central National Bank which was closely linked to the livestock and wool trade in the city. Town boosters used pictures of the house in promotional pamphlets such as the 1909 Stilwell's Prophecy. Although now in poor condition, it is a focal point in the western part of the city being located on a now busy commercial corridor.

ABSTRACT/SUMMARY COMMENTS:

Please provide a concise statement of significance which will justify the property's eligibility for the National Register. What sets this resource apart from the cluster of other similar resources and why were these resources not nominated as well? At present, the statement of significance does not clearly explain why this property is architecturally significant.

SIGNIFICANCE

This is the only extant, unaltered Classical Revival residence that was once part of a cluster of similar houses. The cluster originally formed the nucleus for the Angelo Heights Subdivision developed after 1905. The C.C. Walsh Residence was built before 1908. Walsh served as president of the San Angelo Bank and Trust Company and later as president of the powerful Central National Bank that was closely aligned with the local livestock and wool trades. Photographs of the house appeared in pamphlets promoting San Angelo such as the 1909 Stillwell's Prophecy. While in deteriorating condition, the building remains a focal point along Pecos Street in west San Angelo, now a busy commercial corridor.
